

OPENS PROGRAM . . . John Mallonee will open the Herald's Cookery School this afternoon at the Civic Auditorium, 1349 El Prado. In his role as master of ceremonies, he will enact the part of a 1910 salesman, giving his pitch, however, about modern automatic gas ranges. He also will do some cooking.

COOKERY TECHNIQUES . . . To show improvements in cookery techniques through comparison of the methods used in the first half of this century with today's, Maxine Howe has planned a series of gas cookery programs entitled "I Remember Mama's Cooking." These free classes will be given at the Civic Auditorium, 1349 El Prado, today and tomorrow from 1:30 until 3:30 each afternoon.

Cooking School To Open Here This Afternoon

Beginning this afternoon, the Modern School of Gas Cookery will present another of its unique cooking exhibitions at 1:30 o'clock at the Civic Auditorium, 1349 El Prado.

Noted throughout Southern California for the entertaining themes of its programs, the School this year offers "I Remember Mama's Cooking" both today and tomorrow from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Homemakers may expect up-to-the-minute culinary information dispensed through entertaining skits on each day, according to officials of the Southern California Gas Co., which is cooperating with the Torrance Herald in sponsoring the programs.

Maxine Howe, whose cooking programs are known to thousands of women from Torrance to Visalia, makes it a point to aid all cooks through use of latest models of cooking appliances, newest type of utensils, and recipes that show use of each cooking section or utensil. All of her cookery demonstrations center around the school's theme, "I Remember Mama's Cooking."

In keeping with the theme, such old-fashioned favorites as homemade noodles, 24-hour-salad, potato yeast rolls, and banana cream pie will be prepared in the time-saving, modern way with automatic gas range and gas refrigerator.

The classes are free.
